Reasons for a Power of Attorney to Come Into EffectA power of attorney can be used for a number of reasons. In general, it will come into effect when it is specified to do so. This specification should be directed by the drafter, also known as the grantor. A few examples may include:The grantor becomes incapacitated and is no longer able to make decisions for themselvesThe grantor experienced a diminished mental capacity because of a sudden brain injuryThe grantor is diagnosed with dementia and AlzheimersIn the aforementioned examples, the grantor may no longer be able to care for themselves or make decisions for their care and wellbeing. When this happens, the power of attorney may come into effect and the named caregiver may now have a duty to make those decisions on the grantors behalf. It must be noted that a power of attorney in Memphis, TN should be drafted and reviewed by an estate lawyer. The reason for this is that if anything is missing or not in place, the document may be considered invalid. For example, if a person drafts their own power of attorney that requests them to be taken off life support after an accident, but they failed to include their signature, it may not be valid. In this tragic case, they would likely be kept on life support – something that would be against their wishes.
